

THE FRIENDS OF THE MUSEUM OF PRINTING

New building campaign

We have visited museums and libraries around the world and The Museum of Printing in Massachusetts is truly one of the leading repositories of the technology and literature of the graphic arts. Many items in the Museum's collection are extremely rare and its library and exhibits are world class.

It is exciting to see students react to the legacy of print when they visit the Museum. In many cases, it is the first time they are touched by print. There is also a renewed interest in letterpress printing by people in all walks of life. Thus, your Museum is a place where the past ignites an interest in the "art preservative of art."

We now have the opportunity to expand and we need your help. Shortly, the Museum will have a new home. It has taken 37 years and now we will have a new and expanded facility. But it needs a lot of work.

For more than three decades the Friends of the Museum of printing have preserved and shared that rich printing and graphics arts history, from type to presses, communications, and printing arts and craftsmanship.

The Museum's phototypesetting exhibit is the only one in the world.

We exist only because of your financial support, and the dedication of volunteers who share your passion for preserving the past and making it relevant to current generations. We need your help again.

To preserve this historic and one-of-a-kind collection and support important exhibits, workshops, lectures, special events, and educational outreach we must upgrade our new facility. We will be able to display more artifacts and host more exhibitions and workshops.
